Who is Brother Polycarp?

- 2nd founder of the Brothers of the Sacred Heart
- A young teacher who decided to consecrate his life to God

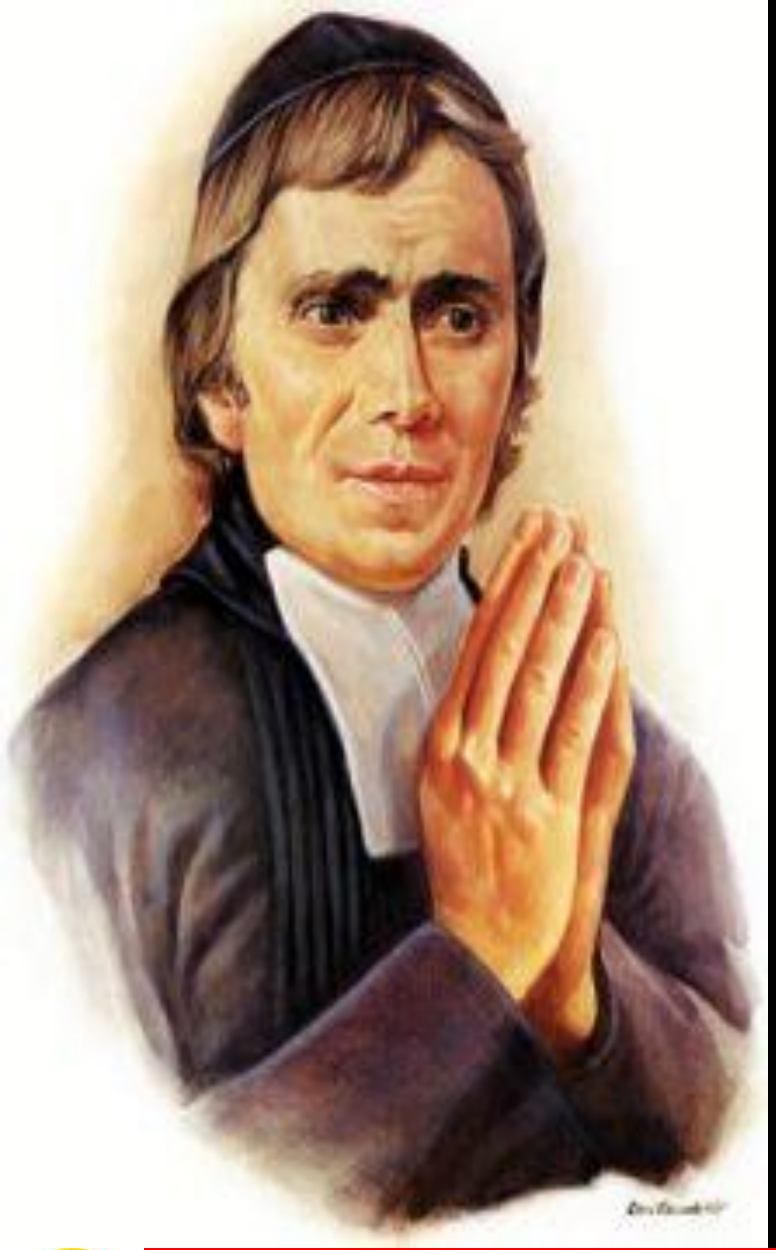

Brother Polycarp: The Love of Youth

- Br. Polycarp loved the youth and he wanted to help them by becoming himself a lay teacher and later a religious educator. His retreat resolutions often mention his love for the youth. “For my pupils, I will have a living charity, an ardent zeal for their progress, a paternal affection and tenderness.

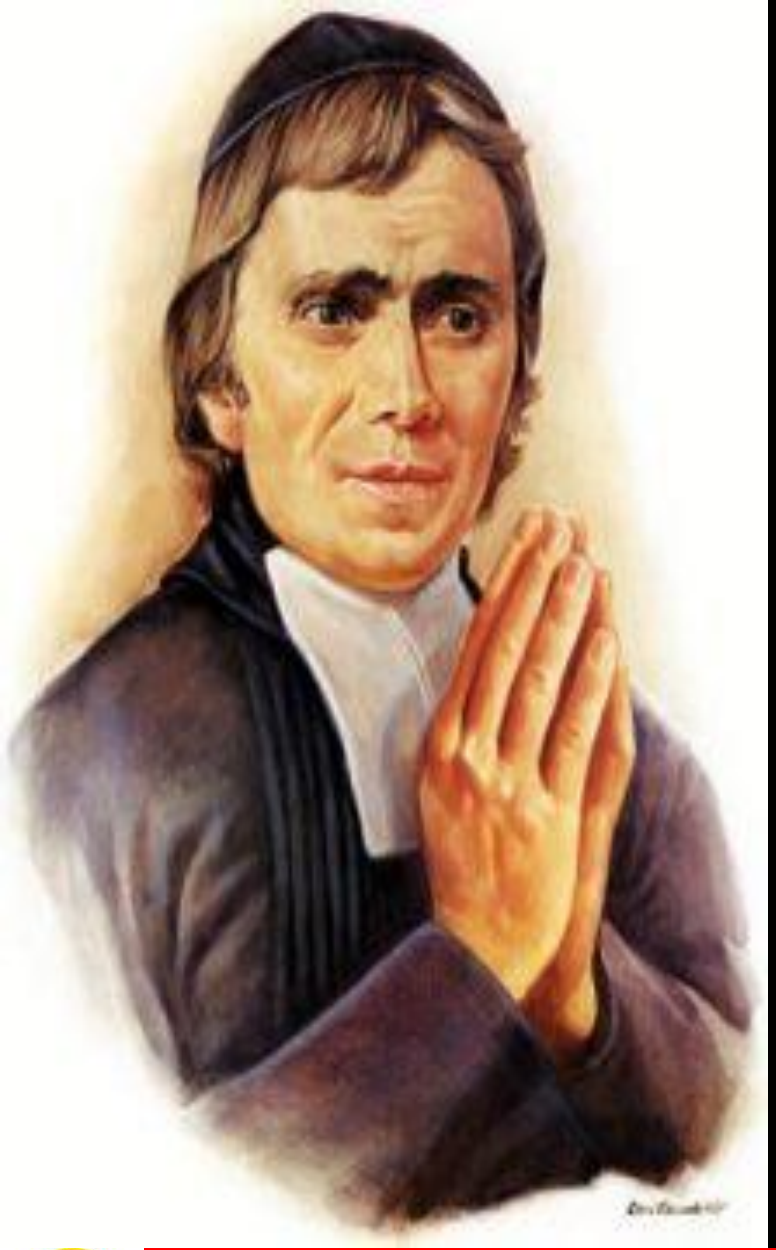

Brother Polycarp: The Virtue of Joy

- "It is not given to everyone to have a great sense of humor, although one can laugh at jokes of others and specially smile. And I propose to imitate this joy because it has been proven that today specially, it is one of things that attract more efficiently the youth to the religious life.

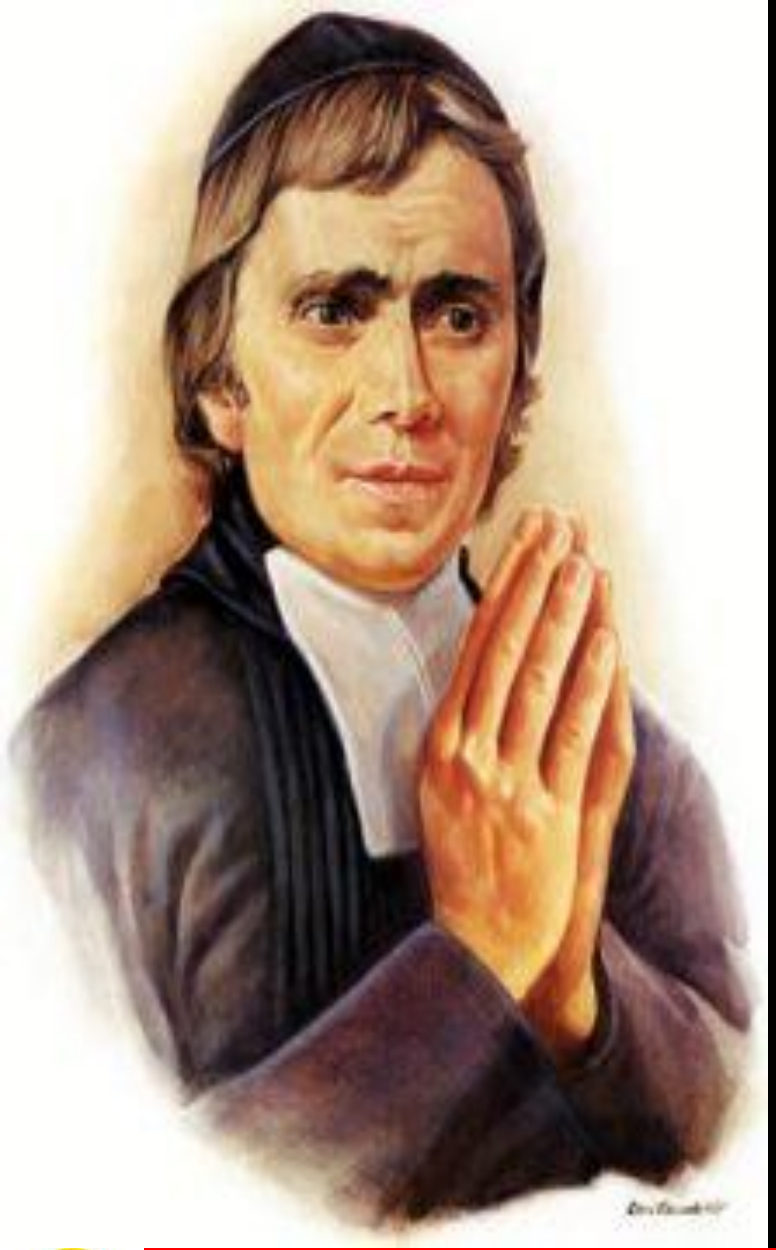

Brother Polycarp: Teachings on the Religious Spirit

- "God chose what was weak in the world to shame the strong" words that seem to be very inspiration for religious life; they may be said to form the backdrop for his vision of religious life and his advice to his brothers.

Brother Polycarp: Teachings on the Religious Spirit

- For Br. Polycarp, to be a religious educator was to live as a follower of Jesus Christ. He expressed this conviction by his "I am firmly resolved to imitate Jesus in all things, and to live only him."

Brother Polycarp: Teachings on the Religious Spirit

- He was a committed religious-educator "I shall always have my students a spirited love, an ardent zeal for their advancement especially in virtue; and finally an affection, a fatherly tenderness. I shall do all that I can in order to win over all of them to the Savior of their souls."

Brothers of the Sacred Heart

- An association of religious men who consecrate their lives to the glory of God, their personal sanctification and Christian education of youth.
- Founded in Lyon, France in 1821 by Br. Andre Coindre, with a noble intention to form them as Brothers in order to devote themselves to educating the children and the youth.
